Storage Tips from Just Money Motorsports:

Drain the fuel and add a stabilizer

1. You can syphon fuel from the fuel tank and run the engine out of fuel, 2. You can fill the tank with a non-ethanol fuel and run through the system, or 3. You can fill the tank at least % full and add a fuel stabilizer approved for ethanol fuel. If you have a gas plastic tank, drain all of the fuel out of your ATV or UTV, including the tank, fuel lines and carburetor. If you have a metal tank, fill the tank up full and add a stabilizer. Metal tends to rust in humid areas, and the stabilizer will mitigate moisture in the gas tank.

Inflate the tires

No tire maintains perfect pressure over many months even at rest, so having your air pressure at the manufacturers' recommended maximum amount you park it will ensure that they are still in an acceptable range when you are ready to play. You'll still need to re-inflate to full pressure before riding the vehicle again, but you'll at least reduce risks of damaging the tires if they become fully flat.

Clean the vehicle

No one wants to get into their vehicle after a long summer and find that dirt and debris have been there all this time. Thoroughly cleaning the interior and exterior of the vehicle ensures that build-up does not occur and keeps your vehicle ready to go at the first sign of fall.

Change the oil and the air filter

The air filter and oil are often quite spent by summer after long days of use in the particulate-filled air of the desert. Plan to change them both before the weather turns hot.

Consider a trickle charger to save battery life

Trickle chargers keep your battery from quickly losing charge and going dead on those stored days, and are worth the investment. Or you can charge the battery fully then remove the positive terminal when not in use.

Choose a good storage location

Finding a dry location like a garage or shed will keep your SXS protected from the weather and vandals. It is even better, if you can avoid sunlight that might reach plastic components or land on the tires themselves. Additionally, use blocks or a lift to keep your SXS off the ground to protect the tires and suspension. If in a rodent potential area, put traps or bait in the main electrical areas of your vehicle. They love the taste of wire in the mornings. lol

With these tips, your SXS will be safely stored for the summer months. Courtesy of your local Havasu SXS Association business member — Just Money Motorsports 928-706-3844 at 2020 Holly Avenue, LCH.
